Politicians of three parties are guessing what the outcome will be at Sedalia July 30, and about all that anybody can make out of it is a fight. There are no avowed candidates for State office, and no hope of success for an independent ticket.

But Missouri was one of the States which wanted a place in the middle of-the-road. Of the 39 delegates from this State to the recent National Convention, 30 voted for Norton, whose candidacy could only complicate affairs, rather than for Bryan, whose election would mean a triumph for

The delegates to the National Convention will demand a vindication They will demand a State platform the nomination of separate electors and a full State ticket. They will be met with the argument that such a policy in this election will be equivaenthusiastic support of McKinley and the State ticket nominated at Springfield. A third faction at Sedalia will insist upon an unequivocal indorsement of Bryan and Sewall. The interest in the convention, however, hinges upon the probable success of the second faction which deserves a compromise. If Missouri should pursue this course the Southern States would in all probability follow the same course. Thomas E. Watson, the man put up by the Populist Convention as Bryan's running mate, has been known the country over as "Tom" Watson since his first election to the Fifty-second Congress, where he made a reputation as a ready debater and noted for his unique personality. He served but one term in Congress, being succeeded by James C. Block. Watson had been elected as a Democrat, but became a Populist before the close of his term, and ran the second order of the day. Oats are making time on the Populist ticket. He is a native of Georgia, born in Columbia County in 1856. He was educated in the public schools. Voters, Take Notice. The time has come when every American citizen should be wide awake, reading and thinking for himself, that he may be able to cast his ballot at the coming November elec-tion with a degree of intelligence, that he may at least hope of bettering his condition in the future. Every man, woman and child should be interested in this matter. You claim money scarce and times hard. You should therefore be equally interested in the question of economy and hence take advantage of our summer slaughter sale in every department, consisting of dress goods, clothing, tan shoes, all slippers, parasols, fans, shirt waists, straw hats, summer underwear, etc. We will positively sell you these goods for less than wholesale price and many things at half price to make room for our elegant new fall stock.
